

Reading group questions for Laura Laakso's Roots of Corruption

Was Yannia right to keep the truth about Lady Bergamon from Jamie?

Was Karrion right to question Yannia about withholding things from Jamie? Do you think he should have gone further and told Jamie?

Do you think Nathenial Laene killed his first wife?

Was Yannia's bargain with the Winter Queen rash - or can you think of something else she could have done instead?

While most of the characters in the series are not human, the Fey are even more inhuman. Do you think they are more fascinating or frightening? Or both?

Would you agree to travel to the Unseen Lands?

How do you see Yannia's friendship with Wishearth developing? Do you think Wishearth's sparks indicate a romantic interest in Yannia? Would it be wise for her to get involved with an immortal spirit?

How would you see Old London's political scene changing if Yannia hadn't saved Lord Ellensthorne?

Why do you think Fria proposed future co-operation with Yannia?

If you could spend an afternoon in one Old London location, where would you go?

If you had Lady Bergamon's longevity, how would you cope with the inevitable loss of friends and family? Would those losses be worth a long life?

What do you think Lady Bergamon truly is?
